The City Traveler's Photo Contest Puts Spotlight on Amateur Shutterbugs

TheCityTraveler.com is looking for a few great images to showcase in its first annual photo contest for amateur photographers.

Grand prize winner will be featured in a photo spread on The City Traveler and receive a copy of Travel Photography: Documenting the World's People and Places by award-winning photographer Bob Krist, whose work has appeared in National Geographic Traveler, Smithsonian and Islands.

Second place will receive Lonely Planet's Guide to Travel Photography and publication on TCT.

Three honorable mentions will get one photo published on TCT.

Finalists also will have their work judged by Krist, a three-time "Travel Photographer of the Year" by the Society of American Travel Writers.

Here are the contest rules:

*Deadline to enter is March 26.

*The contest is open to non-professionals only.

*Submissions must be city-related shots of people in urban settings, architecture, cityscapes, street scenes, etc.

*Each participant may submit up to five images in 72-dpi jpeg format.

*Photos should include information on where and when they were shot.

*Send images to: staff@thecitytraveler.com
